

Working with journalists during Covid-19 outbreak

The National Police Chiefs Council Communications Advisory Group has agreed to these guidelines being circulated to, and adopted by, Police Forces in England, Wales & Northern Ireland.

Police officers are likely to have contact with journalists who will continue doing their job during the Government's Covid-19 Coronavirus restrictions. The following guidance outlines how this should be approached.

- There is a public interest in keeping the population informed of the developing crisis and subsequent recovery / return to normality
- Responsible journalism promotes good community relations and assists the emergency services, which is essential in the current health emergency
- Police will engage with them if officers are unsure why they are out.
- We will expect them to comply with the Public Health guidelines e.g. social distancing, and if not we'll explain and encourage them to do so.

